

Part II: Standard 7. Resources, Facilities and Equipment

The School's research and teaching support resources are accessible in a number of ways across a variety of platforms. The resources at the University Library and the School of Communication Library are available to all professors and Communication students. Due to the damages caused to the School's building, the School's library is now located at the third floor of the University Library. The collection has been relocated to the same building where the academic community has a variety of areas where they can use computers, access the Internet and study, individually or with groups.

Resources to students and faculty are available onsite and online. These resources include academic search engines and on-line databases, which are available both on-site and remotely. An extensive collection of mass communication, journalism, and social sciences journals are available through these databases. The following list includes the publications currently available through these databases:
